Dear Mr. Weisberg,

I wonder if you would mind assisting us in a great venture? I represent a newly formed group called the "Coalition for Action". Our steering committee consists of a law student, a writer, a high school student, and a housewife. In the last few months we have attended a number of conferences and watched a great many television shows dealing with the assassination of John F. Kennedy. These varying accounts have left us angry and frustrated. We feel that the time has come for a united effort to reopen the investigations into the death of President Kennedy, and to this end, we are in the process of organizing a series of conferences for early next year. We feel that too often researchers spend their valuable time "splitting hairs" on the details of the assassination and unfortunately the resulting feuds and accusations support this belief.

Basically we all want the same thing — the truth — and we think that the time is right to put aside our differences and join together as a single unit with a single objective: the reopening of the investigation.

Naturally we felt we must write to you for your advice and assistance with our plans. On the next page of this letter I have written a few brief questions. Please feel free to comment on these.

We value your time and your opinion, and thus we have also enclosed a self-addressed stamped envelope for your reply.

Thank you for your help.

Mrs. Ginger Purdum
Coalition for Action

1. How do you feel about supporting a "Coalition for Action"?

2. Do you think it's a good idea?

3. Do you think it will get enough support?

4. Do you think it could be instrumental in reopening the case?
